

Globalization from a public policy perspective

This seminar is intended to help attendees to acquire the necessary skills to work in the future in international institutions, such as the World Trade Organization.

The idea is to give them a general overview about the determinants and effects of foreign trade and investment, how trade negotiations are conducted and how the World Trade Organization works. In addition, access to comprehensive related databases will be explained.

The seminar is organized in a highly interactive way. Attendees are expected to be taking part in expositions and discussions after having studied the provided audiovisual and written documentation.

The seminar will be bilingual. Expositions and documentation will be both in English and Spanish.

Location: sessions will take place in an aula de ordenadores to be announced in the Facultad de Ciencias Económicas y Empresariales (Campus de Somosaguas)

For registration a CV in English and a snapshot of updated grade report should be sent to:
